

WELCOME

Andrew Frasz

The High Line is both a nonprofit organization and a public park on the West Side of Manhattan. Through our work with communities on and off the High Line, we're devoted to reimagining the role public spaces have in creating connected, healthy neighborhoods and cities.

Built on a historic, elevated rail line, the High Line was always intended to be more than a park. You can walk through gardens, view art, experience a performance, savor delicious food, or connect with friends and neighbors—all while enjoying a unique perspective of New York City.

HISTORY

1934, the original railway opened transporting millions of tons of meat, dairy, and produce.

By the early 1980s, no more trains ran along the line, and the tracks fell into disuse.

The structure remained threatened by demolition until 1999, when Friends of the High Line begins lobbying to save and transform the structure into public open space.

2003, the High Line hosted an “ideas competition,” receiving 720 ideas from over 36 countries for ways the park might be used (including ideas that were neither realistic nor practical, like a rollercoaster, or a mile-long lap pool).

2009, the first section of the High Line between Gansevoort and 20th Streets opens to the public.

2011, Section 2 opened (20th to 30th Streets); 2014, the Rail Yards section opened (30th to 34th Streets); 2019, the Spur, the final section of the historic structure, opened; 2023, the High Line – Moynihan Connector opens.

2024, the High Line celebrates the 25th anniversary of the founding of the nonprofit Friends of the High Line and the 15th birthday of the park.
